DEMOCRATIC ADDRESS.

unanimous verdict of these gentlemen that a blow had been struck at the very vitals of free government by the method and practices enumerated, and that every consideration that can appeal free men to act for the protection of their most sacred rights demands that the foul wrongs inflicted on the State shall be redressed through the agencies appointed by law.

In the proceedings to accomplish this end it is but just to say that the ambition of no man or candidate has been considered. The situation rises above individual, and becomes one of great peril to the citizenship of the whole State; and the candidates of the Democratic party, in obedience to the supreme duty of the hour, are used merely as the instruments by which the wrongs may be rectified and the dignity and honor of the State vindicated.

IN A FINE LAWYER.

Judge Simon Baldwin, Who Will Be President of the International Law Association.

Judge Simon Baldwin, of New Haven, Conn., who next year succeeds Mr. Richard Webster, attorney general of England, the eminent position of president of the International Law Association is not only a learned jurist, but a man who has distinguished himself many odd fancies that from time to time have attracted attention all parts of the country.

It was only thirty that the judge urged the necessity of resorting to the use of the wing post in Connecticut. This commendation he made to the municipal judges of Connecticut, of the supreme court Judge Baldwin is a member. This was in February or September he made himself most conspicuous figure at the Sanga convention of the American Association of Social Science by boldly advocating that a law be passed prohibiting physicians from prolonging their scientific skill, the lives of persons who are suffering from a mortal malady. This sentiment evoked unbounded astonishment in Christendom, coming as it did, from a supreme judge and the president of the association itself.

Judge Baldwin was born in New Haven in 1840 in families of distinguished ancestry. He is a great-grandson of Roger Sherman, and his father occupied a position on the supreme bench of the state of New York. He is a Yale man and a Yale and Harvard both.

The judge has been professor of constitutional law at Yale, president of the American association, and counsel for the New York & New England railroad. He is a well-known contributor to the literature of the law, and eight years ago he was made LL. D. of Harvard.

The Origin of "Gringo."

People often wonder and ask why the Mexican calls the American a "Gringo," or what the word means. That can be explained much later than why the American calls a Mexican a "Gringo." When the Americans went to war with Mexico a noisy every verse of which ended with "Green grows the rushes, oh," was very popular. It pleased almost everybody's fancy, and was sung by old and young. While in camp the soldier would sing constantly, and all the Mexicans could hear was: "Green grows the rushes, oh." They immediately began to call the American soldier by the first two words as it sounded to them, "gringos." They made it into one word, by which they will know the Americans—"Gringo."

A New York Physician Advises His Patient to Take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

[LETTER TO MR. PINKHAM NO. 73,926]

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM—I have three children and suffered with falling of the womb and flooding. My physician scraped the womb, still the flooding continued and I was no better. At last he advised me to use Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. Then I thought I would write to Mrs. Pinkham for she could advise me better than any one if I was to take her remedies. I received her reply and followed all her directions and I am very glad to send you this testimonial, for Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is just what it is recommended to be. I advise all women who suffer from these complaints to try it."—MRS. LEMPE, 108 2D AVE., NEW YORK CITY.

"A year ago I was a great sufferer from painful menstruation. I could not lie down or sit down for the dreadful pain each month. I wrote to you and took twelve bottles of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and it has helped me so I cannot find words to express my gratitude toward Mrs. Pinkham. I am to-day well and hearty."—Miss JANE SAUL, DORSEY, CLARK CO., KY.

More than a million women have been helped by Mrs. Pinkham's advice and medicine.

PREMIER OF COREA.

Romantic Career of Clarence R. Greathouse, of Kentucky.

Wealth and Honors Heaped Upon the Head of the Man Who, at Least Partially, Americanized the Hermit Kingdom.

The career of Clarence R. Greathouse, the Kentuckian, who recently died at Seoul, Corea, almost rivals in romance the adventures of some of Dumas' heroes. The metamorphosis of the young sailor, Edmund Dantes, into the fabulously rich count of Monte Cristo, was not more startling, and scarcely more improbable than the evolution of a Kentucky boy into prime minister, and almost king, of far-off Corea, wrapped in oriental luxury and jealously guarded from harm by a barbaric monarch, whose devotion to him was as strong as if Mr. Greathouse had come of a long line of Korean ancestry.

The wildest dreams that his boyish fancy cherished probably never touched anything so far removed from the ordinary as what came to pass.

Thirty years ago, says the Cincinnati Enquirer, Clarence Greathouse was editing a country newspaper in Versailles and practicing law. He was then 23 years old. He was born on a farm about two miles south of the town. He received his legal education at the University of Virginia, and was a young man of fine natural ability and brilliant promise.

Attracted by the boom on the Pacific coast young Greathouse emigrated in the fall of 1869 to San Francisco, and through the aid of his kinsman, Lloyd Tevis, the multimillionaire goldbug (who recently died in that city), and by his own ability and force, he was soon occupying an enviable position as an attorney. Later he became a partner in the legal firm of "Stewart, Greathouse & Blanding," of which Senator William H. Stewart, of Nevada, was the senior member.

In 1885, soon after President Cleveland went into office, Mr. Greathouse was in Washington arguing a case in the supreme court. One of his friends, who had influence with the administration, asked him how he would like to go to Yokohama, Japan, as consul. Greathouse replied that he believed he would like it. A few days later he was given the appointment, and wired his widowed mother, with whom he lived in San Francisco, to pack up and be ready to move to Japan. Two weeks later they set sail from San Francisco.

CLARENCE R. GREATHOUSE.
(Kentuckian Who Was for Years Prime Minister of Corea.)

Mr. Greathouse was a very efficient and businesslike consul, and made such a fine record that he was continued in office until his resignation. During his term as consul he had rendered great service to the king of Corea, by giving him advice, and his royal highness soon became of the opinion that he couldn't conduct the affairs of his kingdom without Greathouse. He created the office "Ho-Pang," corresponding in civilized monarchies to the position of prime minister, and bestowed Mr. Greathouse to accept it.

"Gen." Greathouse, as the king called him, was a potent factor in the development of Corea, and the king was said to be in full sympathy with his Yankee ally, favoring the building of railroads, the development of the mines, the opening of the ports to foreign commerce and the teaching of the English language to the Koreans.

Greathouse was said to have an interest in mining in Corea, and with the princely salary he received from the king (said to have been nearly $100,000 a year) he was enabled to live like a lord. He did not affect the peculiar oriental garb, the triple-decked headgear and jade in which he had been pictured by a San Francisco newspaper some years ago, but always wore the plain dress of an American citizen.

Mr. Greathouse cared nothing for money aside from what it would buy, and the life of oriental ease and splendor which he led in Seoul was said to be very agreeable to him. He was a singular compound of clean-cut intellect, great ability and dreaminess.

New Style of Pitcher.

The new pitcher for serving iced drinks is an English invention, and beautifully presented in both green and ruby glass. To put ice directly in the beverage weakens its strength and flavor. This is obviated by the introduction into the new pitcher of a glass inner cylinder (resembling a lamp chimney as much as anything), with a silver top and screw cork. In this the cracked ice lasts a long time, the drink poured from the pitcher proper, and renewed again and again as required.

How Wood Is Utilized.

Cooperage woods have advanced 50 per cent, largely caused by the enormous demand from the whisky colonies. Experimenters are trying to make cloth and soap out of the wood pulp. Sawdust and wood waste have almost as great a value as the clean plank, ten years ago.

As Elephant as a Nurse.

A little New York boy has the biggest nurse in the world. The nurse's name is Babel, and it is the gentlest elephant that ever was. The baby is the little son of the elephant's keeper, and it is hard to tell whether the elephant loves the baby or the baby loves the elephant most. If the elephant should make a mistake and set its big foot down on the little one, or should strike it with its swinging trunk, there would be no more baby. But there is no danger of that, and the baby plays about between the elephant's big feet and looks up laughing at the big, swaying trunk.

Have You Heard Of It?

You may have heard about SCOTT'S EMULSION and have a vague notion that it is cod-liver oil with its bad taste and smell and all its other repulsive features. It is cod-liver oil, the purest and the best in the world, but made so palatable that almost everybody can take it. Nearly all children like it and ask for more.

looks like cream; it nourishes the wasted body of the baby, child or adult better than cream or any other food in existence. It bears about the same relation to other emulsions that cream does to milk. If you have had any experience with other so-called "just as good" preparations, you will find that this is a fact.

The hypophosphites that are combined with the cod-liver oil give additional value to it because they tone up the nervous system and impart strength to the whole body.
